The Lanberg CAT 6 Network Cable combines efficiency with dependability for outdoor use. Designed with pure copper conductors, this cable ensures optimal performance with a tested frequency of up to 250 MHz. It is built with a gel-filled structure that provides protection against moisture, making it suitable for various environmental conditions. The durable PVC jacket offers additional strength, ensuring longevity in harsh outdoor settings. The length indication feature adds convenience for installation and minimizes waste by allowing precise measurements during setup. Housed in a reel package, this bulk cable allows for easy handling and storage, making it a practical choice for network setups.
