surface.

- Adjust your laptop screen to the correct height, angle, and distance so that you automatically adopt an ergonomically correct posture.

Ergonomic background

- Distance between your eyes and the screen should be 50-80 cm (approximately an arm length), depending on monitor size and resolution. Adjust the distance of your screen (VGB DGUV Information 215-410, 2019, S. 93.).
- The angle of your line of vision to the middle of the screen should be approximately -35°, so also adjust the height of your screen (VGB DGUV Information 215-410, 2019, S.46.).

High-quality aluminium sandwich material in the trend colour dark grey.
The high-quality aluminium sandwich material of the Ergo-Q 160 is lighter than aluminum and at the same time more resistant to dents. The Ergo-Q 160 consists of one thin and one thick layer of aluminium sandwich material. This special composition makes it extraordinary stable and indestructible. The open design of the laptop stand gives enough ventilation space, so that your laptop stays cool.

The dark grey design with a matt surface of the Ergo-Q 160 is modern and elegant.
And is an absolute eye-catcher for every workplace.

Laptop work has never been healthier.
You’d like to reduce and prevent physical discomfort and work more productively with your laptop? Then start using the Ergo-Q 160 and stop bending your neck and back "into your screen". With the help of a laptop stand you get your laptop screen to the right height, angle, and distance, and this leads automatically to the adoption of a healthier posture in front of your screen.
