Noise Hazards

Prolonged exposure to noise will result in either temporary or permanent hearing loss, or symptoms such as dizziness, headache, chest tightness, tinnitus, and memory loss. Working in an environment with noise above 85dB (A) for a long time may cause occupational noise-induced hearing loss, and the noise in tactical shooting even can reach 150dB.

Double Hearing Protection

Dynamic Noise Cancellation

The integrated ANC (Active Noise Cancellation) chip is designed to automatically reduce low frequency noises higher than 82dB, like the whistle. The extended memory foam (Passive Noise Cancellation) can effectively reduce high frequency noises such as human voices.

Fast Reaction Technology
