R2,730

Small wireless detector that notifies of glass being broken by intruders. It is installed at a distance of 9 m from the window and filters events that cause false alarms about breakage.

Principle of operation

Detects broken glass using an electret microphone, which registers the sound of impact against the glass and of the glass falling.

Features

Two-factor detection of broken glass prevents false alarms caused by thunder, dogs barking and noise from passing trucks.

Installation and set up

The product information provided is for reference purposes only. Technical specifications, photos, descriptions and prices may change without prior notice. The manufacturer and seller are not responsible for possible data discrepancies or typographical errors. We recommend checking the current information before purchasing.
